1 Introduction

Football which is also known as football or soccer, which includes 11 players for two teams who try their best to hit the goal in other team goals without the usage of hands and arms. Only the goalkeeper is allowed to handle the ball and may do it only within the penalty area surrounding the goal. The team which scores more goals at the end when time gets completed wins the match, Football is the world's most popular ball game in number of participants and also the spectators. Simple in its principal rules and essential equipment, the sport can be played almost anywhere, from official football playing fields(pitches) to gymnasiums, streets, school playgrounds, parks, or beaches. Football's governing body, the Federation Internationale de Football Association (FIFA), estimated that at the turn of the 21st century there were approximately 250 million football players and over 1.3 billion people "interested" in football; in 2010 a combined television audience of more than 26 billion watched football's premier tournament, the quadrennial month-long World Cup finals. Modern football originated in Britain in the 19th century. Since before medieval times, "folk football" games had been played in towns and villages according to local customs and with a minimum of rules. Industrialization and urbanization, which reduced the amount of leisure time and space available to the working class, combined with a history of legal prohibitions against particularly violent and destructive forms of folk football to undermine the game's status from the early 19th century onward. However, football was taken up as a winter game between residence houses at public(independent) schools such as Winchester, Charterhouse, and Eton.

3 Overview

By the early 20th century, football had spread across Europe, but it was in need of international organisation. A solution was found in 1904, when representatives from thr football associations of Belgium, Denmark, France, the Netherlands, Spain, Sweden, and Switzerland founed the federation internationale de Football Association(FIFA). Although Englishman Daniel Woolfall was elected FIFA president in 1906 and all of the home nations(England, Scotland, Ireland) were admitted as members by 1911.

Nevertheless, in 1920 the british associations resigned their FIFA membershios after to persude other members that germany, Australia, and Hungary should be expelled following World War I. The British associations rejioned FIFA in 1924 but soon after insisted upon a very rigid definition of amateurism, notably for Olympic football. Other nations again failed to follow their lead, and the british insouciance toward the interntional game continued, Without british national teams were not invited to the first time competitions(1930, 1934 and 1938). For the next competition, held in 1950, FIFA ruled that the two best finishers in the british home nations tournament would qualify for World Cup play; England won, but scotland(which finished second) chose not to complete for the world cup Despite sometimes fractious international relations, football continued to rise in popularity. It made its official Olympic debut at the London Games in 1908, and its has since been played in each of the summer games(except for the 1932 Games in Los Angeles). FIFA also grew steadily especially in the standing as the game's global authority and regular of competition, Guinea became FIFA's 100th member in 1961; at the turn of the 21st century, more than the number of countries that belong to the United States
